Hamstra Continues Longtime Partnership With Save A Lot Grocery Stores

The Hamstra Group recently renovated the Hammond, Indiana Save A Lot, a grocery store that the Hamstra team restored 20 years ago. The project was completed in the Fall of 2020 and included both interior and exterior improvements. The interior remodel consisted of painting walls, installing new coolers, freezers and ceiling tiles, and replacing the old linoleum, revealing the store's original concrete floors.

Save A Lot co-owners Tony Parker met Greg Hamstra nearly 30 years ago and resonated with "the principles that Greg's company stood for and kept." Parker and his business partner Todd Hinson hired the Hamstra Group to construct their first Save A Lot location—a partnership that has since involved the construction or renovation of 11 retail buildings.

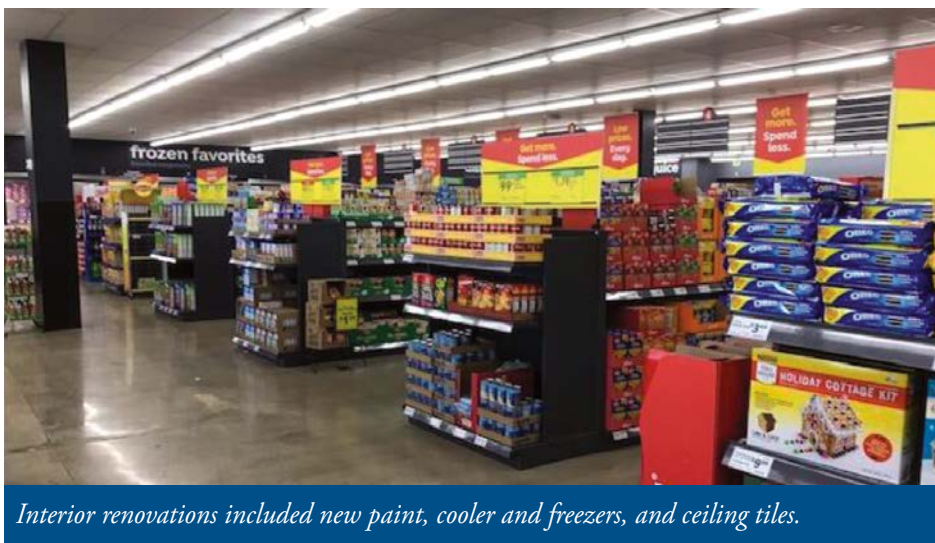

Hinson explains that the Hamstra team "made it very easy to navigate the various challenges during the project. From start to finish, they kept close communication with all parties from the subcontractors to the team at the store level." Organization and communication were key to ensuring this project's success.

Hamstra's Craig Minter and crew completed this project on a tight schedule and kept the business in operation as much as possible during construction. Parker states that "Curt Albertson was a standout Project Manager and Craig Minter was a very knowledgeable and reliable General Contractor leading the team on this project."

With construction now complete, Parker and Hinson "are excited to offer a fresh and modern look to our loyal customers of 24 years to the Hammond community." The entire Hamstra Group team was honored to continue this long-lasting relationship with the Save A Lot family.

The store's new exterior matches the corporate Save A Lot image.

Interior renovations included new paint, cooler and freezers, and ceiling tiles.

The floors now have a polished concrete finish.
